GERMAN MILITARY EXPERTS SAY "BATTLE OF ANNIHILATION" AGAINST ALLIES IN FRANCE AND BELGIUM HAS BEGUN; ADMIT PROGRESS HAS BEEN SLOWED DOWN ALONG WESTERN FRONT

German High Command States That Belgium and Northern French Ports Which Might Have Been Used by British Troops Attempting to Escape From the German "Iron Hand" Have Been Completely Destroyed.

(By International News Service)

BERLIN, May 23—While German military experts declared that a "battle of annihilation" against Allied forces in France and Belgium has begun, the Nazi high command today announced slow but steady progress by German forces on the western front.

Belgium and northern French ports which might have been used by British troops attempting to escape from the German "iron hand" have been completely destroyed, it also said.

In this connection, today's communique said that Dover, Britain's greatest military port on the channel opposite Calais, has been bombed. (Editor's note: The British War Ministry formally denied tonight that Dover had been attacked.)

The war communique read:

"In Flanders we are attacking across the Escaut River against strong enemy resistance and are slowly gaining ground.

"Near Valenciennes fighting is still in progress. The hardest fighting near Narmal, southeast of Valenciennes, where French forces had taken refuge were moved up.

"Attempts of enemy armored forces to break through near Cambrai were frustrated in co-operation between the army and aircraft with heavy losses to the enemy."

In western Artois, German troops are advancing from the wedge northward in the general direction of Calais.

LONDON, May 23 — German forces attacked British possessions in the Escaut region but were repulsed at many points, an official London announcement said today, admitting at the same time that German motorized units had "succeeded in reaching the neighborhood of the French coast."

Details of the latest fight were contained in a British war communique.

"In the Arras section there was fierce fighting. We successfully maintained our position on this section of the gap between Arras and Bapaume (to the south).

"Through this gap the enemy succeeded in passing armored elements, followed by motorized units which succeeded in reaching the neighborhood of the coast. Steps are being taken to guard vital points against these detachments."

"There was much air activity in northeastern France, German bombers and reconnaisance aircraft being shot down by anti-aircraft batteries and small arms."

Lions Club Hears Interesting Discourse

Approximately 20 members and guests of the Bristol Lions Club, newly formed service club group in this community, held their regular meeting at the "Can Take It Club," Croydon, on Tuesday evening. Frederick V. Bowers, celebrated composer, singer and pianist, the man who wrote "Because" and "Always," was the guest speaker. Joseph Aita, president of the club, was in charge of the meeting.

Bowers, who has been an outstanding creator of successful songs for more than 40 years, gave a very interesting demonstration with words and music of the romance of song writing. He told the Lions and their guests stories of famous songs and their singers and their singers and discussed the colorful personalities of the men and women songwriters of America.

Against his rich background of 40 years in the theatre, Mr. Bowers recreated the famous men and women of the stage, and told the stories of their songs. A brilliant speaker with sparkling humor and a delightful personality, he interspersed his charmingly informal program with musical gems of his own and his hearers' selection.

The speaker also outlined the history and work of the ASCAP, or the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers. This organization, which is a voluntary, unincorporated, non-profit making organization, has a membership of 1000 song writers today and it holds the exclusive right to license and collect royalties on all public performances of their works.

Arrest Captain Ramsay

London, May 23—The Speaker of the House of Commons today announced the arrest of Captain Archibald Ramsay, a Conservative, under secret charges given to the Home Secretary.

Captain Ramsey was lodged in Brixton Prison, the Speaker refused to give the reason for the arrest "at this stage."

Only a short while before he had raided the western headquarters of Sir Oswald Mosley, British Union of Fascists. At about the same time a man in the uniform of a British army officer had been arrested at the door step of 10 Downing street. He was endeavoring to see Prime Minister Churchill.

Weir Warns Against War

New York, May 23—Deterioration of the nation's military establishment was charged directly to the Roosevelt administration, today, by Ernest Weir, president of the American Iron and Steel Institute, and chairman of the Republican Finance Committee.

At the same time, Weir urged no part by the United States in the European war—unless this hemisphere is invaded, and warned that the war would find all belligerent nations using totalitarian economic methods to recapture market losses to neutral countries during the conflict.

Weir levied a charge of "provoking bad foreign relationships" at the administration, recalling President Roosevelt's speech in 1937 in Chicago and declaring:

"He has been outspoken in his opinions regarding the European controversies. He seems to have completely forgotten that the Monroe Doctrine is a two-way proposition."

Women To Organize

New York, May 23—Members of the National Legion of the Mothers of America today began making plans for a rifle-equipped army to combat parachute troops and "fifth columns" who might invade the United States.

Mrs. Edna L. Johnston, Acting Regional Director of the organization which claims two million members said it was hoped to have ten million mothers equipped with rifles and machine guns by July 1st. Kathleen Norris, author, is national president.

Increase President's Estimate

Washington, D. C., May 23—A Congress plainly worried by United States military shortcomings today raised President Roosevelt's administration defense estimate by more than one quarter billion dollars.

The Senate and the House took care to push appropriation and enable spending for war planes, combat boats guns, ammunition, other equipment and more soldiers, sailors and marines which will pass the $3,500,000,000 mark.

SUSPEND SENTENCE ON BANK EMPLOYEE

Witnesses, Court, Employers All Agree That Clerk Used Poor Judgment

LOSES HIS POSITION

DOYLESTOWN, May 23—Benjamin F. Horner, 36, until recently assistant treasurer and teller of the Doylestown Trust Company, pleaded guilty yesterday before Judge Hiram H. Keller in the Bucks county criminal court, to a charge of embezzlement. Sentence was suspended and Horner was directed to pay the costs and placed on probation for one year.

During the course of the hearing it was brought out that Horner committed a technical error in covering up a shortage of $900 in his day's accounting of receipts of November 28, 1939, but that no evidence was discovered by the bank examiners of an intent to defraud. Bank officers and an examiner testified that Horner, so far as they could learn, received no part of the $900 himself.

Although the bank discharged Horner, officers of the institution for whom he worked for 18 years, testified they had explicit faith in him and still have. Horner, it was brought out, was discharged because he had falsified the records after he discovered a shortage. He has a new position.

RED CROSS HERE TO AID WAR SUFFERERS

Bristol Branch to Solicit Funds and Sew Garments for Stricken of Europe

BURGESS ISSUES APPEAL

Bristol Branch of the American Red Cross met yesterday afternoon in the headquarters at 120 Mill street and organized for the raising of the Bristol quota of a fund needed to aid the homeless and destitute as the result of the war in Europe.

The meeting was called to order by Mrs. William DuHamel, head of the Bristol Branch. Mrs. DuHamel vividly outlined to the women assembled the urgent need for not only funds but garments as well. The meeting feelingly received the appeal and the women took up their assigned duties with enthusiasm and a determination to put this branch over the top.

It was decided that in the solicitation of funds that the same personnel be used and the same methods followed as were used during the annual roll call last November. Mrs. Frank Lehman will direct the solicitation.

It was announced that women desiring to sew may do so any day except Saturday and Sunday. The headquarters at 120 Mill street are open every day, except Saturday and Sunday, and those desiring to sew garments for the war sufferers as well as the local civilian population may do so. They are requested to take a thimble and a spool of cotton. Tuesdays and Thursdays have been designated especially as sewing days but there is always someone on duty at the Bristol headquarters on the days that they are open.

The material cut out for the garments is sent to Bristol by the South-

GOVERNOR JAMES INSISTS CONGRESS STAY IN SESSION IN REARMAMENT CRISIS

Chief Executive of Penna. Assails Roosevelt Hint That It Adjourn—Warns of Dictatorship Peril—Speaks Before Minnesota State Central Republican Committee

By International News Service

ST. PAUL, Minn., May 23—Governor Arthur H. James of Pennsylvania today called upon the American public to demand of Congress that it remain in continuous session pending completion of the national defense program and abatement of the international crisis.

The Republican governor, an unannounced candidate for the GOP presidential nomination, coupled with this demand a suggestion that President Roosevelt "take the whole question (of defense) completely out of politics" by announcing he is not a candidate for a third term.

"One brief statement would clear the atmosphere," Governor James told the Republican State Central Committee of Minnesota on the eve of its convention to select delegates to the Republican national convention. The Governor's address, entitled "Roosevelt or peace," was broadcast last night over a nationwide network.

It was essential that Congress remain in session, said Governor James, to prevent any possible misuse of defense funds to build up a "political war chest." He would urge the Pennsylvania delegation in Congress to vote against adjournment, he added.

It was also necessary for Congress to remain in session, asserted Governor James, to correct the mistakes made by the New Deal, which, he added, "as a body of political and economic theories died last Thursday." That was the day the President delivered his billion-dollar defense message to a joint session of Congress.

"The New Deal, as a going economic and political concern, went busted last Thursday," said Governor James. "It needs a board of receivers to conserve its assets and reorganize it into something which will prevent its being a further liability in our national economy. I know of no better receivership for the New Deal than . . the National Congress."

Governor James spoke as follows:

"It is with a sense of deep appreciation that I come here tonight as Governor of the largest Republican State to address a gathering of Republican men and women representing all parts of Minnesota.

"Let me say at the outset that I am not going to talk politics betyond saying this: So far as I am concerned there will be neither a blackout nor a fadeout of the Republican Party so long as there is a threat that the blood of a single American boy will be shed in useless war.

"Instead, I have a very simple message on issues that transcend the ambitions of men and of political parties—the welfare and safety of our Nation.

"I have two suggestions for which I ask the most serious consideration of the men and women of America, in the full knowledge of all the dangers visible and hidden which beset this Nation.

"These suggestions will in no way interfere with our progress in re-arming America. That is a program which has been far too long delayed, and into which we must plunge with the utmost speed and energy.

"But Pennsylvania does not, and neither do the patriotic men of Minnesota—nor for that matter, America—believe in building a war machine without brakes. We do not wish to

INFANT FATALLY HURT IN FALL FROM BED

Nine-Months-Old Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Stradling Is Victim of Accident

DIES OF HEAD INJURY

MORRISVILLE, May 23—A nine months old baby was fatally injured yesterday afternoon when the young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Stradling, 30 Green street, fell from a bed on which her father had just placed her. Death is said to have been due to a head injury.

Mr. Stradling placed the baby on the bed while he was making a change of clothing in the crib and a moment later the infant rolled over and dropped less than three feet to the floor. The baby was not thought to have been injured, but later became ill, and Dr. James M. Klenk, of Morrisville, was summoned. Dr. James Lawler, deputy coroner, of Bristol, was called to view the body.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

National Unity

Washington, May 22.

IF in the coming six months the vital business of preparing for defense is to get effectively under way and neither effort, time nor money be wasted, clearly the prime essential is national unity. Without that, and without the help of competent men of real business experience and capacity for executive administration, the job is bound to be botched, no matter how many billions are made available.

—o—

OBVIOUSLY, it would be easier to achieve national unity if this were not an election year. But it is an election year and it can't be changed. There have been, it is true, suggestions from various irresponsible sources that the two parties should get together, do away with the campaign and agree to let Mr. Roosevelt continue in office indefinitely. But that is not only silly; it is hysterical. For one thing, though we are not in war, and may never be, practically it would transform the nature of this Government from democratic to dictatorial. As this is the very thing against which press, public and politicians have been steadily exuding indignation, the notion is an absurdity.

FOR another, such a plan would be repugnant to a very large proportion of the people, including a good many Democrats, including many Democratic Senators, including certain members of the President's own Cabinet. For still another, it is not the way to get results. If anything could more effectively prevent national unity than to have it suspected that the war situation in general and the defense program in particular are being used to promote a third-term attempt, it is difficult to

TWO MEN INJURED IN EXPLOSION AT ZINC WORKS HERE

King Bell, Colored, and Stephen Glovna Are Still In Hospital

BUILDING IS DAMAGED

Company Officials Estimate Damage May Reach $10,000

An explosion at the plant of Superior Zinc Corporation yesterday afternoon injured two workmen in the dust room, and caused damage to the building approximated at $10,000 or more.

The injured:

King Bell, colored, who was removed from the structure in an unconscious condition; and Stephen Glovna.

The two men were rushed to the Wagner private hospital in company cars, where they are still patients.

Bell was not burned, but complains of a pain in his side. Glovna has burns of the eyes, neck, left side of face and chest, and burns of left hand and elbow.

Although practically no damage was done by fire, Bristol Consolidated Fire Company members were called. The damage due to the force of the explosion mounted.

The dust room is located in a building approximately 60x150 feet, it being of brick, with a slate roof. A hole was ripped in the roof, just over the separator, the machine at which the two men were working. In sections, the roof was raised from the supporting wall a few inches.

Described by plant officials as a possible dust explosion, it occurred at 2.30 o'clock. Although the noise was not particularly noticeable, the concussion was noted by a number of residents living nearby.

Fellow-workmen hurried to the aid of Bell and Glovna, there being six engaged in the room at the time. The damage to contents of the structure was confined practically to the separator, plant officials state.

SHRUNKEN HEAD SECURED BY TRAVELER IN PERU

Dr. John J. Steele Prizes Head of Peruvian Indian, Now One-Sixth Normal Size

JOURNEY OF 10 WEEKS

A shrunken head of an Indian from one of the numerous tribes found in the mountains of Peru, is the prized possession of Dr. John J. Steele, acquired by him on his recent trip around South America.

There are but two replies that the Bristol physician makes when queried about difficulty of securing this head, which is shrunken to about one-sixth ordinary size. As to the manner of obtaining it, he invariably replies: "I shot it;" and when asked if he had difficulty in making the owner part with it, he says: "Well, I finally got it."

The dark head, practically black, presents a sinister appearance, with its lips tightly sewed together. The long, coarse hair, silken of sheen, is in good state of preservation, as are also the eye-brows and eye-lashes. "This Indian probably met his death during the past few years," states Dr. Steele. "We were told that after the individual is killed, the bones are removed from the head; the mouth and eye-lids sewed shut, and the head filled with hot sand and shrunken. That is the only part of the process the Indians reveal. But the specimens are difficult to secure. That was one of my main reasons for traveling to South America, to secure one. And I got it." The successful Indian in the combat, is privileged to attach the shrunken head of his defeated foe to his belt.

Among trophies brought back by the Bristolian, are some more pleasant to look at. Trays of cedar, with inlaid work of sycamore and other woods, are enhanced with gorgeous colored butterfly wings, many in the rare shimmering blue and lavendar tones. One tray, the largest Dr. Steele purchased, shows five scenes of the harbor at Rio de Janiero, all fashioned of the butterfly wings.

The journey by boat took the localite down the East coast of South America and up the Western coast, with the Southern tip of the country being crossed by automobile and train. On numerous journeys inland he traversed the sections by donkey, auto-carrel, and other means.

The first stop of the 10-week journey was at Barbadoes, B. W. I., while visits along the East coast include Rio, Santos, and Montevideo. In the waters near Montevideo he viewed what was left of the ill-fated Graf Spee, with only the tower above water. The ship has been sold to a junk dealer.

From Buenos Aires the party continued to Mendoza, then to Panta

Loretta Duffy Has Leg Placed in Cast

Loretta Duffy, 11-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Duffy, Pine street, who was injured Saturday evening when she is said to have been struck by an automobile, had her left leg placed in a cast yesterday, following X-rays which determined that a bone had been broken.

The accident occurred at Jefferson avenue and the highway, the driver of the car being Mrs. William Crawford, Edgely. The little girl was treated at Dr. Wagner's hospital for scratches and brush burns of the face and knees. After swelling of the limb had subsided, X-rays were taken on Monday, and the cast placed yesterday. Loretta is now at her home.

THURSDAY, MAY 23, 1940

THE GOOD SAMARITAN

There is one way in which the United States can help the Allies and all the nations of Europe which have been victims of aggression. It has nothing to do with isolation or neutrality or militant partisanship. That which is referred to here is the $10,000,000 drive sponsored by the American Red Cross for the relief of the constantly increasing number of refugees and war sufferers.

All the funds, unless a great home emergency arises, will be devoted to helping those nations with which Americans openly sympathize. This is not a violation of Red Cross principles or a discrimination against Germany and Russia. The truth is that the totalitarian states have served notice bluntly that they don't need American Red Cross funds. Why should they? They haven't been invaded. They are the invaders.

With a clear conscience, Americans can support this appeal with the knowledge that their money and supplies will help their friends, the very people who stand for the democratic liberties and the human decencies which are the foundation of American life.

Millions are needed immediately if the losses sustained during the course of invasion are not to be tragically increased through sickness and starvation. The people of the United States will surely respond to such a call. The time may come when Americans will be forced to meet the agents of this suffering in more potent ways, but until then the least they can do is play the Good Samaritan to their victims.

HOBBY TALKIE

The versatile Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt now has entered the movies, having taken part in the first of a series of movie shorts on hobbies. She provided the climax of the brief film by describing the hobbies of the various members of her families. The President's hobby is his naval collection—books, prints, letters and models of ships; James collects historical books, Elliott's hobby is his farm, that of Franklin, Jr., is arguing; Johnny's is riding and Anna's is her job with a chain-paper.

A President once said that it is impossible to describe what it is like to be the Chief Executive of America; it is something that has to be lived. If that were true, few would ever have any idea of it, since only one American can be President at one time. But it seems that with such an active publicist as Mrs. Roosevelt attached to the White House, the average American will get a general idea, before the second term is terminated, of what it is like. If Mr. Roosevelt were similarly energetic as a publicist—although it must be admitted that he does well—the nation might get a specific idea.

With development of television, the official side of the President could be an open book, with daily broadcasts from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m., and a few fireside shots thrown in. Then every boy in the land could decide whether he wanted to be President, and a lot of talent now spent in studying politics could be transferred to vocational education—and hobbies.

So strangely silent has Mr. Garner become, it is almost as if he were Vice-President.

Early to bed and early to rise and you miss the midnight bulletin that Hitler is shooting another bystander.

"TITAN TOWER"

By JAMES G. CHESNUTT

Story So Far

Drawn together as they aid accident victim atop Titan Tower, new skyscraper, Nurse Linda Morton and Dr. Bill Blaine sense mutual affection. With memories of her love for late Airman Mike Morton still warm, however, Linda feels very mixed emotions as she day-dreams of possible romance with the debonair young medic. After her harrowing roof-top experience, Linda returns home, unnerved. Her mind goes back to that tragic night when Mike was killed in a crash. After his death, no word of sympathy came for Linda from Mike's wealthy parents who disapproved of her marriage. So, when Mickey was born, she did not let them know. Linda's reverie is interrupted by the arrival of her friends, naive Janice Marberry and sophisticated Josephine Monroe. Speaking of the accident, Linda asks if they know Dr. Blaine.

CHAPTER EIGHT

Dr. Blaine, Jo told Linda, was one of the city's most brilliant young surgeons, specializing in orthopedic, or bone, surgery. He and young Dr. Leonard Renquist were proteges of Dr. Franc Carter Vance, the swankiest surgeon in Titan Tower, whose suite occupied nearly the whole nineteenth floor. Dr. Vance's name—all three of them—was at home equally in the Social Register.

Bill Blaine was blue book himself. His own family had money, money, money, and Papa —— John Ralston Blaine, if you looked on page 12 of the Register——practically built Titan tower and owned the building. Chairman of the board, or something like that.

"Yes, indeedy," Jo concluded, "you're going first-class if you're interested in Bill Blaine."

"I'm not interested," Linda flushed. "That is, not the way you emphasize the word. I'm just curious, that's all."

"Fine stuff," Jo scoffed. "I'm interested and you can emphasize that any way you like it." Well Linda bridled, "maybe he's interested even if I'm not. He said he was afraid he'd wake up tomorrow, after I'm gone. How do you like, that, smart gal?"

Jo said:

"So?"

Just the one word. But the way she arched her eyebrows spoke volumes. Linda was sorry she had flared up and spilled everything.

"Skip it, Jo," she said, "I was just talking to be saying something."

"Afraid I can't skip it, darling," Jo answered. "I've got plans for you. If I can't have designs on a man of my own, there's nothing I like better than cutting up a plot on somebody else's man. Listen, how's about after dinner? We can really dig into the subject."

"All right then, after dinner," Linda answered, and stopped, hand to mouth.

"Oh!" she said. "Dinner. Poor Mickey must be starved! Now, will you pests clear out of here—or shall I call a cop?"

"I'll go quietly, captain," Jo grimaced, and did with Janice."

"Mickey, darling,' Linda called into the front room after they had gone, "do you mind being a vegetarian—just for tonight?"

"What's a vege——vegetarium, mother?" Mickey wanted to know, poking a grimy face around the door sill.

"You are, son." Linda grinned. "Tonight, anyway. It's a man who hasn't any chops. And your own chops, by the way, are a bit on the soiled side."

Mickey and Dopey both had another face wash before they ate.

Jo Monroe crushed a virtually unsmoked cigarette stub in an ash tray on Linda's kitchen table, took a last sip from a cup of black coffee and looked from the cup directly into Linda's eyes. Linda held her gaze only momentarily and then looked down into the dregs of her own cup.

"C'mon, honey chile," Jo said, quietly for Jo. "Take your hair down and tell Mammy everything. It's got you, hasn't it?"

"Why . . ." Linda faltered. "What do you mean . . . ?"

Jo pushed her chair back from the table and answered:

"What do I mean, darling? Look, do you want me to draw pictures? I'll give it to you in words of one syllable: Him, you, bang! Romance—no that's two; let's call it quote love unquote."

"Jo!" Janice Marberry interrupted her. "I don't see anything so funny about it. Linda didn't say she was in love with anybody, did you, honey?"

That was Janice. Love to her was something to be spoken, something to be felt, not a subject for riddles; nothing to be furtive about.

"You don't see anything funny!" Jo exploded. "Jan, precious, you wouldn't. Here, for a solid half-hour, Linda has been telling us the thrilling story of the operation on the roof; of how a young Doctor Blaine performed a brilliant bit of surgery.

"She's told us," Jo continued, "how Dr. Blaine looked down when he asked for a clamp, how Dr. Blaine's fine blond hair annoyed him, how Dr. Blaine's skilled bronzed fingers flew about his task, how Dr. Blaine's eyes—nice blue eyes even when they were angry—snapped when something disturbed him, how Dr. Blaine modestly shared credit with others after the job was done."

Jo paused to draw a deep breath and plunged into her finale.

"While Linda studiously tries to hide her real feelings under a phoney guise of professional admiration, she forgets to tell us about anything but Dr. William Blaine. You'd think, to listen to her, that the two of them were alone on the roof. And then Linda asks me what do I mean. I repeat: The lady has it bad!"

It was Linda's turn to draw a deep breath.

"Well," Linda finally said. "That doesn't leave much for me to say, does it?"

"You see, Jan, dear," Jo turned to the brown-eyed girl, "she couldn't keep it a secret from Aunty Jo. I know the symptoms too well. I've been exposed to it. There ought to be a law that all young doctors should have to look like Frankensteins or passport photos before they are licensed to practice.

"No, Lin," Jo turned to the topic of discussion, "there isn't much for you to say. Suppose I say it for you. I'll be speaking out of turn, and if you don't like it you can tell me to scat. I'm only giving it to you straight because you're such a grand guy. Here it is:

"Look, Linda, you have some fun coming out of life. You've had lots of breaks so far—all bad. You deserve a lot better. You really like the guy, and let's suppose he really falls for you. So what happens?

"So this:" Jo answered herself, "So he asks may he come to call, as a gent will, so you say won't you come in, I'm Whistler's mother, apprentice grade, working toward my diploma in free-style knitting and arm-chair rocking, all by my lonesome. And DO meet Junior, my son, isn't he a big boy? So he joggles Junior on his knee and proposes to you and you are one big happy family? So, hooey. He DOES not!

"Linda, guys like Bill Blaine are interested in GIRLS, not in sweet homebodies and mothers of somebody else's kids. You're young, you're darned attractive and you're alive. Why don't you do something about it? Why not play smart—and play single . . . ?

"Josephine Monroe," Janice said, "I think that's AWFUL!"

It was a long speech for Janice, But it was spoken from the heart.

"If you're quite finished, Mother Monroe," Linda said, "with your tips to the lovelorn, may I say a word?"

"Shoot!" said Jo. "It's your affair."

"In the first place," Linda said, "I haven't said that I'm in love with anyone. I don't know that I am. I don't resent what you've said, Jo, because I know it was meant to help me, but I'll tell you this: If I have to hide Mickey, like something I'm ashamed of, in order to get a little fun out of life, well—you can have the fun. He's worth more to me than any man in the world. I'm—I . . ."

Linda stopped, her words hung up in mid air.

She knew she meant them; she wished they were true—but they weren't, wholly.

Jo was right, Linda was more than ripe for a little enjoyment out of life, a little fun for Linda, she who had given and sacrificed for Mike Morton and for Mike's son.

Would she be such a fool as to deny Mickey, her own Mickey, just for a while? Or would she be a bigger fool to risk losing the first man who had really stirred her deeply, the first since Mike Morton?

Linda, the mother, answered no to the first question.

Linda, the girl—a girl as normally selfish as the next one—heard the second question and, to it, answered yes.

Mickey Morton, asleep in his crib, with Dopey the doll cradled in the crook of his little arm, didn't dream that a word or sign from a tall young man with nice eyes might make Mickey an orphan, by duplicity, at any time.

Neither did Linda dream it, at that instant. But the seed was there.

"Come on, Jo," Janice said. "Linda's tired."

"Sorry, sister," Jo said. "Just Aunty Jo popping off. Don't give it a second thought. And don't get me wrong about Mickey. He's still my favorite boy friend."

"Goodnight, girls," Linda smiled. "Get home safe."

She stood at the door and watched them walk the thirty feet down the hall to their own rooms.

Then she went to Mickey's crib, dropped to her knees and remained there a long time before she went to her own bed.

think what it is. Nothing would offend a greater number of people.

—o—

NOT many will dispute that. Then it logically follows that nothing would promote national unity so much as the complete removal from the public mind of all suspicion that the general desire to co-operate with the head of the nation in an emergency was being used by his political strategists to rivet his hold on the White House for another term; that he was conniving in that effort; that all his nonpartisan gestures and noble words were made with that end in view. That being the case, it would seem clearly in the national interests that the third-term threat be eliminated. If wholehearted nonpartisan co-operation is wanted, if it is desired that politics be adjourned, then that step is clearly indicated.

NO one can do anything toward taking that step except the President himself. He alone can remove that bar to national unity, and he can do it in less than twenty words. No man ever had a greater opportunity to serve his country by putting aside his personal ambition. It would be a thrilling thing if he could see it that way. It would give him a far higher place in history than is possible any other way—and far greater soul satisfaction than if he lets the pay rollers and politicians who are insisting upon his seizing this opportunity for another term have their way with him.

THIS job of preparedness is his job—no one else's. If it is well done, it will wipe out memories of New Deal failures and put the nation heavily in his debt. The vital time is the next eight months. Until January he will be President and in complete control. In a few days he will have gotten the billion from Congress. Already he has all the power he needs. It will be unnecessary to ask Congress for anything else. Unless there is a greater emergency, Congress will not be in session for eight months. In that period the really important work can be done. It will be well done if he can achieve national unity and genuine nonpartisan co-operation.

ONE would think Mr. Roosevelt might be eager indeed to do anything to bring about that state. It seems impossible he should not realize that the third-term movement, if allowed to proceed unchecked until the convention in July, will breed suspicion and engender a bitterness bound to lessen national efficiency and minimize his own efforts. It seems impossible for him not to realize that if he permits his managers to continue the "draft" movement until the convention and then, yielding to the manufactured clamor, makes an attempt to seize a third term, everything he does from now until November will be tainted with politics. Under such conditions he could not and would not have the nation solidly behind him.

ON the contrary, there would ensue a fight so bitter that the vital business of defense would be smeared with politics and the minds of the voters clouded by the third-term issue. That is as certain as it is that national unity in the matter of defense can be achieved by Mr. Roosevelt if he chooses to put the third term definitely away. Neither the appointments of Republican Knoxes and Landons nor the bringing of nonpolitical businessmen into the Administration will remove the taint. Inevitably they will be translated into terms of third-term politics.

THOSE are mere gestures, which so long as the third term threat persists will be—and justly—looked upon as gestures which play the game of the inner-circle Corcorans, Cohens and Ickes. Everybody knows Mr. Roosevelt can get the nomination if he wants it. That ought to be enough for him. Either national unity in the matter of national defense is as important as he says or it is not. If it is, then he ought to be big enough to make the one obviously great contribution he can toward it. He has a superb chance to rise to a great height; but, if the feeling of his intimates is any sign, he will not even try to do it.

Vagas, Argentina, and Valparaiso. The journey across 100 miles of the lower part of the country was made by automobile, an avalanche having wiped out large sections of the railroad. Ports in Chile had many attractions; and in Lima the oldest university in the Western hemisphere, the University of San Marcos, held the interest of all. While in Lima, Dr. Steele saw the girl who at the age of five years was said to have given birth to a child. The girl was a patient in a children's hospital, where she had been for many months.

The pre-Inca stone work at Oliantaytambo, Peru, was one of the main attractions on the journey, the marvel being the exactness with which this was executed. At Cuzco, Peru, the party halted. This was once the capital of the Inca empire, and stands 11,440 feet above sea level. A city of some 30,000 inhabitants, largely Indian, its old walls, fortifications, and irrigation work of Inca and pre-Inca periods form a source of increasing interest to the traveler and archaeologist.

The home-ward journey was via Ecuador, Colombia and the Panama Canal.

lose the war against dictatorship getting ready for it.

"We have available two brakes for the defense machine which we all concede is so badly needed. One is the American Constitution, and the other is the National Congress, composed of the elected representatives of all the men and women of all the states.

"My suggestions tonight are, first, that the preparedness program of the National government be immediately revised to include the American Constitution instead of discarding it, and, second, that the American people, directly and through their State governments, demand of Congress that it do not adjourn until America is re-armed and until the international crisis has abated.

"For seven years the New Deal has been attempting to by-pass the Constitution. We all remember the various methods which have been tried: the Supreme Court packing bill, the reorganization bill, the Senatorial purges, the use of relief funds to try to thwart the will of the people in elections, the setting up of bureaucracies at Washington subject to no restraint save that of the executive who appointed them, the attacks on states' rights, and propaganda that the American Constitution was a relic of the horse-and-buggy days.

"The New Deal has objected to the American Constitution for the very reason which should most compel the men and women of this Nation to preserve it. The New Dealers have fought it because our founding fathers used that Constitution to put a fence around the powers of the President. If we are to have a Republic, if this is to continue to be a government of, by and for the people, those fences must stand — must stand, yes, and be strengthened.

"Let it never be said that the American Constitution is a splendid peacetime document, but unfitted for war. The Constitution was conceived during world conflict as grave as exists today. It was baptized in blood while Napoleon was ravaging Europe on a scale even greater than Hitler has yet achieved. The Constitution has demonstrated its worth in helping America win three major wars.

"A free people, with their liberties guaranteed by such a Constitution and defended by their leaders, can always outfight an equal number of enslaved victims of dictatorship.

"We do not need to speculate about what the New Dealers would do to the American Constitution the moment either actual danger or war hysteria permits. They already have told us.

"The New Deal mobilization bill provides for the immediate suspension of every constitutional provision guaranteeing the rights and liberties of the American people.

"The day that mobilization bill becomes effective, in its present form, constitutional democracy stops in this Nation, and we will have a dictatorship. It will be a dictatorship with its emblem the Stars and Stripes and not the swastika; but it will be a dictatorship as complete and as far out of the control of the American people as Nazi warlords have been beyond the control of the men and women of Germany.

"We already have seen a seven-year skirmish in the battle for the preservation of the American Constitution. America's shock troops in that battle to defend the American way of living have been the national Congress. Backed by the unmistakable will of our Nation, Congress has well demonstrated the wisdom of our founding fathers in making the legislative branch of government co-equal in authority with the executive.

"In his message asking Congress for new funds for the purchase of fire apparatus to help protect us from the four-alarm fire raging in Europe, President Roosevelt paid tribute to the importance of Congress. He said: 'The Congress and the Chief Executive constitute a team where the defense of the land is concerned.'

"But in the same breath he delivered the broadest sort of hint for the adjournment of Congress as soon as it has passed the appropriations he asked.

"Don't forget one thing. No matter what promises are made, the cold fact still remains that once Congress adjourns no power on earth can call it back into session except the President himself. Think that over.

"Ask yourself this question. If Congress and the President constitute a team where the defense of the land is concerned, is it wise or safe to send half the team back to sit on the bench while the greatest war game of our generation is being played?

"I call upon Congress to remain in session. I call upon the people of the United States to demand that it resist both hints and pressure for adjournment, and continue to occupy its front line trench until all America is satisfied that we are protected alike from aggressors from without and borers-from-within.

"I shall urge Pennsylvania's delegation to vote against adjournment. I suggest that Minnesota follow that example. Let all the governors in all the states, in the name of peace and security, do likewise. Let the friends and advisers of the President himself counsel him against pushing his suggestion for adjournment.

"There is more involved here than merely keeping a bulldog in Uncle Sam's political front yard while we make a musket for his shoulder.

"Congress has services it can render this Nation, during the next few months, which no other body can give, and which are of supreme importance to our national defense program.

"For one thing, Congress can protect the New Dealers and the President himself from the further activities of the fifth column that has succeeded in so long delaying adequate defenses.

"Thinking Americans can form only one conclusion as to why the New Deal, with limitless money and almost limitless power, has failed to keep Uncle Sam prepared to defend himself.

"We have seen a National Administration which for seven years has been flirting with the Communists. Communism in all its forms has been a guest at the New Deal table, and it has needed no Dies Committee to tell us that the reddest Reds and the pinkest Pinks have been and still are high in the New Deal counsels.

"Can any of us doubt that it has been due to infiltration from a Communistic fifth column that America's preparations to defend herself have been so long delayed?

"Congress is in far better position than the President to weed out anti-American elements in our National Administration, and in our diplomatic service. Congress is the Nation's best defense against the fifth column which inescapably is at work in America. But Congress, once it adjourns, is powerless in this direction.

"Remaining at Washington, Congress can control all the termites, including the third-termites, that army of New Deal fat-cats who pray for Roosevelt's re-election on the sole grounds that it would keep them living four years longer in political clover at the public's expense.

"The third-termites would hesitate not a moment to foment a war scare to try to protect their jobs and their political gravy. They would not hesitate to shame the American Flag by using patriotism to mask their greed and ambition. They would not hesitate even to demand postponement of the conventions and of the Presidential election itself to postpone their day of reckoning.

"Congress, by remaining in session, can protect the Nation and the President alike from such selfish and short-sighted advice. Believe me, brethren, he needs that protection.

"There is a further consideration of which this Nation is scarcely yet aware.

"The men and women of the United States are just beginning to awaken to the fact that the New Deal, as a body of political and economic theories, died last Thursday.

"The New Dealers have spent seven years and sixty billions of dollars trying to make planned scarcity work. Nearly sixty thousand million dollars have gone with the wind of boondoggling and leaf raking. They have been spent to buy votes instead of battleships. Planned scarcity as a policy is totally and obviously incompatible with a program of adequate military preparedness. The President himself, in the clearest terms, pronounced the death-knell of planned scarcity in his appeal for re-armament.

"The New Deal program of the last seven years has given America thousands of rusted-out mills and factories which now must be replaced, thousands of plowed-under farms which now must be re-cultivated, millions of unskilled workmen who must now be trained, and a Mammoth Cave full of gold now becoming worthless. All that was done in the name of planned scarcity, and it must all be undone before America can be on a basis of self-protection.

"The New Deal, as a going economic and political concern, went busted last Thursday. It needs a board of receivers to conserve its assets and reorganize it into something which will prevent its being a further liability in our National economy.

"I know of no better receivership for the New Deal than the elected representatives of the American people, the legislative body designated by the Constitution for this very purpose —and I refer to the National Congress. Repealing and amending the Federal statutes to thaw out the frozen resources of this Nation and to make them available for National defense is a job which will keep Congress busy for months, and it is work which must be done promptly and well.

"Only Congress is in position to see that the political misuse of relief appropriations, which has been a national scandal for years, is not duplicated in the administration of moneys made available for defense purposes.

"America would forever hang her head in shame if history wrote on her pages that one cent of funds appropriated to a defense war chest followed relief moneys into a political war chest. That is a disgrace from which the United States must be protected, and Congress, by remaining in session, is in position to prevent it.

"Another disgrace which America might suffer and which Congress can prevent is that the defense appropriations be used to line private pockets. War profiteers, whatever their connections, must not be allowed to bleed these funds. America's slogan can well be—Millions for defense, but not one cent for profiteers.

"Fifty thousand airplanes a year will require a system of airports on a scale far greater than the Nations has in sight. Mechanized armies, to be effective, will need military highways spreading from shore to shore in a network far beyond the capacity of anything now in existence. These again are fields in which the Congressional half of the national defense team can be of great service to the Chief Executive.

"It is unfortunate that this emergency arises on the eve of the national conventions and the presidential election. There are undoubtedly many in the United States who believe it would have been proper for the President, in view of the crisis he outlined, to have taken the whole question completely out of politics by seizing the opportunity to renounce any third term ambitions. One brief statement would clear the atmosphere. Unmistakably it is his move.

"His failure to do so already is being construed in his own party as meaning that political considerations are not to be forgotten. Already certain third-termites are seeking to stampede the country into what they are pleased to call a 'draft Roosevelt' movement.

"Their conduct cannot fail to raise the question of whether this is defense mobilization or political mobilization.

"Continued efforts by the third-termites to give this country the radio jitters, and thus obscure the vital issues, cannot fail in the long run to raise the disturbing question of the good faith of the National Defense Program as outlined to Congress.

"If we use the safeguards available to us, we will not risk losing the fight against dictatorship getting ready for it. By that course, we will run no risks of being embroiled in war preparing to maintain peace. By that means, we can isolate the germ of Desire for War, and give the first innoculation of that serum on the banks of the Potomac.

"The New Deal slogan of seven years, 'Talk big and carry a pop-gun,' is now dead and we are ready to return to the good old American doctrine of 'Speak softly and carry a big stick.' That is a slogan worth resuming not only for our national policy but also for our personal guidance as individuals in whom lodges the final authority of this Nation.

"We as a people have a big stick we can use against enemies at home as well as abroad. That big stick consists of the individual and collective rights guaranteed us by our Constitution. Beware of any voice which urges you to lay down your big stick, whether he asks it in the name of preparedness or anything else.

"We all concede that America needs re-arming. Most of us demanded long ago that this country prepare to hold her own in the arena of nations.

"A generation ago America organized an army division for the first World War in which were men from Maine and men from California, men from Oregon and men from Florida, men from Pennsylvania and men from Minnesota, men from the north and south and east and west. Those men stood shoulder to shoulder in the ranks, and they battled side by side in what we then hoped was a war to end wars.

"Recent events have demonstrated to us how completely that war failed to make the world safe for democracy. But disappointment over failure to achieve the end of permanent peace will never tarnish the gallantry of the soldiers who merged their racial and geographic differences in the famous Rainbow Division.

"Tonight America is calling for another Rainbow Division. She needs forty-eight states that will stand shoulder to shoulder to make America safe for democracy. Far later than we should, we have awakened to our dangers from abroad. The next few months will tell whether we have awakened to our dangers from within.

"Our first duty is to our own country. We must re-arm America so that the Stars and Stripes and all they stand for will be forever safe.

"Pennsylvania is proud to volunteer her services in this new Rainbow Division. As Governor of the Keystone State, I wholeheartedly pledge the full co-operation of our industrial Commonwealth of ten million people in a drive for proper and adequate defenses.

"As I look into the faces before me tonight, I know that Minnesota also stands ready to put her shoulder to the wheel. I know that Minnesota as always is ready to do her full share in protecting our flag.

"But one final warning. Let us resolve not to permit that new Rainbow Division to be mustered under sealed orders. Let's find out where we are going.

"I for one take no stock in the belief that we need to have war. I believe that re-armement, coupled with a policy of no more meddling, no more burning of Uncle Sam's fingers at the fires of Europe, will be the best possible guarantee of continued peace.

"Almost all the world is engaged in a gigantic Dance of Death, and I still think it will be possible for Uncle Sam to be a wall-flower at that vast military ball.

"I know America wants peace, and I for one am tired of hearing the New Dealers brand every man who urges peace an 'isolationist.'

"But if war must come, I know of only one war worth fighting, and that is a war to preserve American liberty.

"Let us reject any temptation to sacrifice that liberty in getting ready to defend it.

"American patriots of whatever party can make no more important decision this summer and fall than to resolve to fight dictatorship and jingoism with ballots, lest one day in the future they have to fight that evil pair with bullets.

"May God preserve our Nation. Give us courage in this hour of peril to see our duty and then to do it."

eastern Chapter headquarters and the garments are put together here.

Mrs. Holland, the executive secretary of this district, distributed 500 garments recently.

A list of the solicitors of funds in the various districts will be announced within a few days by Mrs. Lehman. The campaign will start Saturday and extend through June 15th.

The following is released:

"War, such as has never been waged before, has come to Europe; and to the maimed and to millions of innocent women, children and the aged have come extreme suffering and horror—often to the very limit of human endurance.

"These war sufferers have cried out to the American Red Cross for help From this active, practical embodiment of the spirit of help that is in all Americans, aid has been sent swiftly. Already, Red Cross volunteers have produced and shipped 900,000 surgical dressings and garments for the distressed. Red Cross field hospitals and ambulance units are hastily being made ready. This organization so far has expended $1,500,000 to lessen the sufferings of this great war, but each day's needs increase with frightful rapidity.

"To meet the most acute requirements, the American Red Cross has appealed to our nation's people for $10,000,000. The quota for Philadelphia and the four surrounding counties is $750,000. We have faith that this amount will be over-subscribed if this imperative need is told and contributions are asked.

"This is a cause in which every citizen should want to participate to the fullest extent of his ability, and each may be confident the Red Cross will put contributions to quick use and to the best advantage. During the fighting in Finland, a most urgent appeal from Helsingfors for serums for desperate needs was received by the Red Cross at Washington. An order to purchase these supplies was sent by cables to London, where they were secured and charged to the American Red Cross. They were flown to Finland; 48 hours after Washington had the appeal, the serums were in Finland and in use at field hospitals.

"Let us remember that the Red Cross is non-partisan, takes no sides, has no favorites, does its tasks without thought of nationality, religion, race or color. 'Mercy and humanity are its creed. . . . Contributions to help in this great work can be made to your local Red Cross representative or Red Cross group.

ON THE SCREENS

BRISTOL THEATRE

Revealing the grim lives of the inmates of a girls' reformatory, Columbia's "Convicted Woman," which opened at the Bristol Theatre yesterday, revealed itself to be a competently acted, capably directed and unusually exciting melodrama.

The picture is alive with the colorful emotional struggle of the women confined behind the drab walls, of their fight to retain their womanly qualities, of their capacity to love and—to hate.

Rochelle Hudson and Frieda Inescort head the unusually competent cast which is predominantly feminine.

GRAND THEATRE

With George Raft and Joan Bennett sharing stellar honors and a strong supporting cast featuring Walter Pidgeon, Gladys George, Lloyd Nolan and June Knight, Walter Wanger's "The House Across the Bay" will have its initial showing at the Grand Theatre, today.

The film is based on an original story by Myles Connolly, and the central figure in the picture is Brenda Bentley, played by Miss Bennett, a young girl confronted with the problem of adjusting her life to a strange fate when her husband is sent to prison for income tax evasion.

RITZ THEATRE

Hollywood's Jackie Cooper, who has already been nationally known as Skippy and Henry Aldrich and goes under the name of Willie Baxter in his latest film, "Seventeen," may have the real-life title of "Dr. Cooper," if present plans materialize!

For Jackie, who himself is now 17 and must soon decide on a career, would like to become a physician, if he can do so without interrupting his successful screen career!

Having proved herself a versatile actress in a dozen screen roles, Constance Moore is featured with Frank Albertson and Robert Armstrong in "Framed" which is at the Ritz Theatre.

BENSALEM HIGH BEATS LANGHORNE; SEVEN RUNS IN THIRD

Owls Assured of Not Ending Season Lower Than Fourth Place

FINAL SCORE IS 8 TO 5

Biedka Runs Into Trouble In The Third Inning

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, May 23—The Bensalem Owls assured themseles of finishing no worse than fourth in the final standings of the lower division of the Lower Bucks County League by trimming the Langhorne Redskins here yesterday afternoon 8-5. Coach George Reimer's charges now own three wins in circuit competition in seven starts whereas the Redskins, who completed their season in yesterday's tilt, have a record of two triumphs and six setbacks. The Langhorne has clinched the cellar berth for the second year in a row.

In hanging up their third straight league win after being tossed for four straight defeats, the Owls built up an early lead then staved off late Redskin rallies to cop the verdict.

Ed Biedka, on the hill for the eighth time for the Redskins, held the opposition to eight hits, but ran into trouble in the third. In that frame the Owls connected for five of their hits, but ran into trouble in the third. In that frame the Owls connected for five of their safeties including a three run homer by Pete Everett.

RAIN CANCELS GAME

The game between the Bridesburg and Bristol A. A. club was called off on account of rain last evening. The game will be played later in the season. On Sunday, the Bristol A. A. club will play at Atlantic City, N. J. The local club will leave Bristol at 11.30 a. m. sharp.

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS

A card party will be held by the Ladies' Auxiliary of Cornwells Fire Co., No. 1, in the fire station, this evening. Mrs. Jane Smith and Mrs. Barnett are chairmen.

EDGELY

The P. T. A. will hold a card party tonight at 8.30 in Edgely school house. Many prizes have been obtained.

Mrs. Clara Kuiper announces the marriage of her daughter, Gertrude, to Lewis N. Praul, son of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Praul, Emilie, at Elkton, Md., Monday noon. The couple will reside in Emilie at the home of the groom's parents.

PEIRCE STAR

FRANK WILDMAN

Son of Mr. and Mrs. William Wildman, Cornwells Heights, is the varsity third baseman on the Peirce School baseball team of Philadelphia. He formerly attended George School.

MAYON PADLO TO MEET WILLIE CHEATEM

Boasting of one of the finest records in Philadelphia and vicinity, Mayon Padlo will appear in the windup of the opening card of Cliff Smith's professional boxing show to be held in the St. Ann's outdoor arena, Wood and Franklin streets, Monday night.

Padlo, who has Willie Cheatem, of Newark, as his foe, has participated in 41 professional fights. He has won 37 of these, lost two, and drew twice. Of his victories, 19 were via the knockout route. Included in his list of knockout victims were: Midget Wolgast (twice), Bobby Masters and Gene Gullatto. Mayon is the brother of Walter Padlo, former A. A. U. champion, who appeared in Bristol on many occasions.

Cheatem also has a fine record. He recently helped Abe Jenkins train for his fight with Lou Ambers. Among the fighters he has fought are: Phil Furr, Washington, D. C.; Norman Quarles, Georgie Kroub, Mickey Maker, Bobby McIntyre, Tippie Larkin, and Reds Cochrane.

This fight is scheduled to go eight rounds, but those who follow professional fighting and know the slugging ability of both of these youngsters, are predicting that the bout will end before the fourth round is over. But if it should go eight rounds, then it certainly will be slaughter.

The Cheatem-Padlo bout will be refereed by Tony "Ton-Ton" Galento, challenger to the world's heavyweight crown of Joe Louis. Galento has signed a contract to appear in Bristol, the promoters announce.

Tickets appear to be selling fast and indications point to an overwhelming crowd on the opening night.

Circus Exhibiting In A Big Top of Solid Blue

The Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus, with the world's largest big top in solid blue, improved air conditioning, a new opening spectacle, "The Return of Marco Polo," created and costumed in France by Max Weldy, and an all-new performance, star-studded by a tremendous array of new European features, is exhibiting in Philadelphia at 11th and Erie this week.

Foremost among the impressive importations is the great Alfred Court, Europe's most famous trainer, with his three famed mixed groups of performing wild animals—Polar bears, Himalayan bears, Bengal tigers, lions, black and spotted leopards, Siberian snow leopards, black and spotted panthers, cougars, pumas, jjaguars and Great Dane dogs, all working together in breath-taking violation of jungle law. Never before has a trainer accomplished this startling mixing of so many species of natural enemies. This is Court's first American appearance.

The leading horsemen of Europe — Hans Strassburger, Vas Concelos and Los Aserveras — with their renowned troupes of dressage and liberty steeds bring the Big Show's horse displays to a new high. The war and big money made their importation possible, as it did scores of other troupes and stars who hitherto would not budge off the Continent.

The Greatest Show on Earth, steaming toward this territory on four long trains, with 1,600 people, 50 elephants, 1,0009 menagerie animals and hundreds of horses, will open its performances at 2.15 and 8.15 daily, with doors open at 1 and 7 P. M., for public inspection of the huge menagerie, including Gargantua the Great, and the long lines of performing steeds in the new horse fair tent adjoining it.
